

New Claims

Applicant adds new Claims 23-40, which are fully supported by the specification as originally filed. Claim 23 recites "the visual indication indicating whether the current response corresponds to a previous response to the question received from the one remote unit," and Claim 30 similarly recites "a visual indication ... indicating whether the current response corresponds to a previous response to the question received from the one remote unit." As noted by Applicant above, the Abrahamson - Ziv-El combination does not render obvious the comparison of a current response to a previous response. Nor does it show the additional subject matter of the dependent claims, such as the display recited in Claim 24, and the similar display recited in Claim 31. For at least these reasons, Applicant respectfully submits that Claims 24 and 30 and their dependent claims are allowable over the cited references, and Applicant respectfully requests consideration and allowance of Claims 24-36.

Claim 37 recites "a plurality of sections on a display simultaneously viewable by users of a plurality of remote units, each section corresponding to one of the remote units, each section displaying: a first portion displaying a remote unit identifier identifying the remote unit corresponding to the section; and a second portion displaying a question identifier identifying a particular one of a plurality of questions." For reasons analogous to those discussed above, the Abrahamson - Ziv-El combination does not teach a display simultaneously viewable by users of remote units having sections that each correspond to one of the remote units that display a remote unit identifier for a corresponding unit and a question identifier. For at least these reasons, Applicant respectfully submits that Claim 37 and its dependent claims is
